Données de marché et commentaires de gestion

As we expected last month, in December European stock market outperformed US market with + 5,52%. We think this trend will carry on in 2017. The divergence between EUR and USD long term rates is higher this month as German 10 year interest rates went down back again to +0,17%. We believe they will rise go in 2017. European equities should still be overweighted against US equities.

Jean-Marc Michelet

The big winner this month is the European banking sector with 12.14% return. One reason is that market anticipates a steepening of the interest rate slope, which is favorable for the bank sector.

The stock market rally after Trump's election is not rational. Hence we decreased our equity position to 30%, and wait to see what will happen. In the meantime we put our duration in negative.
